Families come in all shapes and sizes. These days, thanks to global mobility and broader horizons, we can have family members all over the world. We take a look at the many wonderful variations of global families and celebrate those with connections in other countries.

More and more people have connections overseas – from parents who retired to the sun and siblings or children working and studying overseas to shared family holiday properties, international in-laws and even destination weddings. These help create family connections in different countries.

Back to school: Supporting a loved one studying abroad

Universities in Europe, the US, Australia and Asia are keen to recruit English students and international league tables can provide a good starting point when it comes to researching universities around the globe.

Once you've created a shortlist, many other factors come into play including the cost of tuition – which can be cheaper than the UK – and the cost of living as well as the potential language barrier. Many foreign universities offer courses of all types to international students which are taught in English but you may want to have some language skills to avoid feeling isolated.

Germany and the Netherlands are both popular options for British students, having excellent transport links and many courses available in English. The Netherlands has a wide range of courses available for fees of just €1540 per year. However, the Dutch government has warned that these costs may increase significantly post-Brexit. While it is significantly further to travel, China is slowly gaining traction as a popular location to study due to the quality and prestige of courses available. As British students find more and more financial obstacles to attending university, the fact that the Chinese government provides some form of sponsorship or support for 40% of British students may cause more students to consider it worth the trip.

What is Erasmus funding?

Erasmus funding provides support for students across the EU to attend university abroad for a year out. The mobility grant is designed to help support students studying abroad and the additional living and travel costs that may be incurred. The UK government has confirmed that any currently approved or pending applications will be honoured until 2020, but there is no clear picture of whether there will be an alternative source of funding post-Brexit. There is a second round of Erasmus funding with a deadline of October, so it's worth keeping a close eye on the development of the Brexit negotiations to discover whether Erasmus funding is available to UK students for the 20/21 academic year.

Graduate studies

Graduate courses abroad are a popular choice; post-graduate courses provide the opportunity to specialise and often students select their institution based on the specialism and expertise of particular university departments across the world. The advantage is that as well as a qualification, there is the chance to build a network in a chosen field with global experts. Studying abroad on a graduate course is also an opportunity to make the most of the experience because you have the maturity and confidence gained from your undergraduate studies behind you. Whether or not UK students remain eligible for schemes such as Erasmus+, it's worth noting that many overseas universities charge lower tuition fees, including on a number of courses taught in the English language, which may make the prospect of studying in Europe, or further afield, more affordable even without this support.

Counting the cost of studying abroad

The cost of living varies throughout the world so it's worth investigating before a decision is made. For example, one reason that the UK is a popular destination for overseas students is that the courses are more intensive and shorter than elsewhere. If you're studying for a Masters, check the duration of the course and don't forget that you might want to account for at least one trip home in a year of study. Even for students on a scholarship or in receipt of external funding, there are many international payments to be made, from tuition fees to accommodation and living costs. It would be worth the investment; a study of CEOs from some of the world's largest companies (as per the Forbes Global 2000 rankings) has found that around a third of the most prominent executives in the business world benefited from international education.

International Families

Marriages often involve people from different countries, helping to build bigger international families and creating connections across the world.

Thanks to global mobility which sees people live and work in different countries, the situation is becoming more common - from international in-laws to global grandparents who retired to a place in the sun, our connections across the world have become part of family life.

Staying connected across borders

Advances in technology have made it much easier to keep in touch with family members, wherever they are. From greater transport links and affordable flights to improved communications technology, distance has become much less of a barrier. Gone are the days of expensive long-distance phone calls with an awkward time delay. Services such as Skype and FaceTime allow people to see each other as well as chat anywhere there is an internet connection. Technology can make both the emotional connection and the practicalities of overseas relationships easier to manage. For example, grandparents who live in sunny Spain can log in to Skype to watch their grandchild blow out the candles on a birthday cake and join in the singing of happy birthday as if they are there in the room.

Supporting family overseas

For many families, regular savings or contributions to everything from birthday gifts to school uniforms can be another way to stay involved. Even if you're settled elsewhere, some new grandparents may choose to book an extended visit to welcome a new family member and provide support. In those cases, being able to send money overseas can help with everything from birthday gifts or much-needed support for cash-strapped students to booking extended trips back home for major events.

Moving back home

We make moving home easy.

Living abroad can be a wonderful and enriching experience, whether for a year or for decades, however for some the call of home is impossible to resist after a while. In those cases, moving back to the UK after living abroad needn't be a lengthy or complicated process.

Here's just a few reasons why as foreign exchange specialists we help customers move funds back to the UK.

Maintaining a property

Even if you rent out your current home, there may be maintenance costs and letting agent fees

Supporting elderly parents

If either of your parents are in a nursing home, or need extra care and support, you may need to be sending funds to support them

Personal pension

If you want to keep up payments to a personal pension, consider what you can send over if you are paid in local currency

School fees and university costs

if you choose to educate your children in the UK while you work abroad, you will need to budget for those fees and any children at university may need a little extra help from time to time to supplement their grant

In the age of global families, an international payments account can help you at every stage of your family life

A currency specialist can help with all the international payments relating to moving overseas and supporting family members across the world.

Specialists offer better exchange rates than high street banks, which also charge higher fees - up to £40 per transaction, and when you add up all the payments, it could make a dent in your savings. For example, ongoing monthly maintenance costs or sending a UK pension payment to your new home in the sun could cost you nearly £500 in transfer fees in a single year.

You also benefit from the expertise of a currency specialist, who can provide guidance on the current state of the market which will help you set a realistic budget. You can also learn about the range of tools available for managing international payments.

Understanding the exchange rate

The only time most of us consider the exchange rate is when we're buying currency for an overseas trip but if you've got family across the world, you may already be very aware of how much it changes. The currency market fluctuates constantly, and responds to both predictable and unexpected political and economic news and events across the world. Currency markets are difficult to predict, but you can understand underlying trends and a currency specialist can help you use tools to mitigate some of the risk so that you don't find that your pounds are no longer enough to buy your dream property.

Managing fluctuations in the foreign exchange market

Fluctuations on the exchange rate are rather like the weather – you may have a rough idea of what's to come, but you can't control it and anything could happen in the space of a few hours. Like the weather, however, you can plan for all eventualities. That doesn't mean the equivalent of packing your umbrella and some sun cream every time you go outside, but it does mean weighing up your alternatives and your preferences to make the right decision depending on your requirements, budget, and your attitude to risk.

A forward contract offers budget certainty

If you prefer certainty, you may wish to set up a 'forward contract' to protect against subsequent rate movements because it allows you to lock a prevailing exchange rate for up to two years. (A forward contract may require a deposit.) Fixing the rate means that you can develop a clear budget plan and be certain that any required payments – from property purchases to a destination wedding or overseas tuition fees – can be made in full and will be affordable within your budget. Exchange rates can fluctuate by as much as 10% or more over a relatively short period of time, so the cost in sterling can be significantly impacted and you may end up paying more than you bargained for. However, it's worth noting that if the rate improves in your favour, you won't be able to take advantage of that movement but if you've got your heart set on a certain property, for example, you may consider this is worth accepting to ensure that you can secure the home you want.

Market orders help you manage your exposure to currency market fluctuations

If you're concerned that you may lose out with a forward contract, a market order might be a better choice for you. This allows you to take advantage of upward movements, but you still have an equivalent to a safety net placed in the market 24/7 that guarantees a minimum exchange rate but allows you to take advantage by buying at a better rate if the market moves in your favour. This may sound like a complex procedure and there are risks but a specialist can provide all the information you need to find out if this approach will work for you and how to set it up. This will allow you to make clear budget plans, with a band of best- and worst-case outcomes which both fit within your budget, whilst also retaining the potential to take advantage of a positive rate.

Regular Payment Plan from moneycorp

Our Regular Payment Plan allows you to automate sending money each month, just like a standing order. You can choose whether to fix the amount of currency you're sending, the amount received, or both depending on how you prefer to manage your budget. You'll also receive great rates and low fees, meaning as much of your money as possible is going towards your family commitments, whether you're supporting a loved one studying abroad, or buying a family holiday home.

Our international payments account can help you maintain and build those connections between you as a global family.

The route you take for making your international payment depends on a number of factors, from the timing and amount of money you're sending overseas to your attitude to risk and budget flexibility. Engaging with a currency exchange specialist will allow you to plan ahead and receive expert guidance on the best approach for you.
